The image shows two screenshots of a web browser. The top screenshot is the Apache CouchDB website (https://couchdb.apache.org). It features the CouchDB logo (a red sofa) and the tagline "relax". The main heading reads: "Seamless multi-primary sync, that scales from Big Data to Mobile, with an Intuitive HTTP/JSON API and designed for Reliability." Below this is a "DOWNLOAD" button for version 3.5.1 (2025-11-11). Three quotes are displayed: "Amongst all the panic and horror [of a power outage], I was smiling.", "The replication in CouchDB is really the killer feature that sets it apart from other databases.", and "Even if the internet was very bad our databases in the two locations would stay in sync." The bottom screenshot is a Bing search result for "couchdb download". It shows the Apache CouchDB logo and a description: "Apache CouchDB is a distributed database that supports HTTP/JSON API, offline sync, and reliability. Download the latest version (3.4.2) or the source code for Windows, macOS, ...". It also lists links for "Fauxton Visual Guide", "Professional Services", "Bylaws", "Wiki", "Code of Conduct", and "CouchDB Meetups". On the right, there is a sidebar with the GitHub repository "apache/couchdb" and a list of links: ".devcontainer", ".github", "bin", and "build-aux".
